Customize Folder Description: Customize Folder Final

Thoughts:Q: WPF - ListBoxItem not changing at runtime I have set up a ListBox with a ListBoxItem, and this works fine at design time. I then add a new ListBoxItem to the ListBox using the Add(item) method. When I add a new ListBoxItem, I want it to change the text of a label inside the ListBoxItem.

When I type this text, it does not update. For example: This is the XAML that shows the label. This is the method that changes the content. `private void Change(object e) { MyLabel.Content = e.ToString(); }` What am I doing wrong?

A: It is important to understand how DataBinding and INotifyPropertyChanged works. If I set the Label.Content to myLabel.Content, this will call SetBinding in the INotifyPropertyChanged, therefore updating the text. I would do this: First, make sure that the binding to the Label.Content is correct, by double clicking the Label in the visual tree. The usual pattern is: If it's not ok, make sure you are writing setters with PropertyPath. Second, implement the INotifyPropertyChanged interface in your class. This can be done by just adding a property `public String LabelText { get { return myLabel.Content; } set { myLabel.Content = value;`
