Non-pyogenic pleuritis was observed in 19 (0.5%) of 3,846 intraoperative pleural biopsies over a 5-year period. The clinical manifestations of the disease were pleuritic pain, fever and some time pleuritic effusion in 15 cases. By post-mortem examination, pleural exudate was found in 13 cases (including the 19 cases) and in 13 cases the peritoneum was involved. Non-specific pleuritis was observed in one case and other diseases were observed in 8 cases. The diagnosis was confirmed by postoperative cultures in all cases. In 1 case, Gram-negative bacteria were isolated, and the other cases yielded various organisms (including four cases of staphylococci). Four patients died. In most cases the etiological factors were not identified. These cases suggest that therapeutic strategy for the patients with non-pyogenic acute pleural diseases should be similar to that for other pleural diseases.1. Field of
