For example, the operating speed of an electronic circuit switch, such as a relay, can be designed to match the operating speed of an induction heating coil. The board connector box which allows the operation of the relay and the heating coil can be mounted on the high voltage switch board. The embodiment of the high voltage switchboard which is designed and constructed for the continuous-flow system application is shown in FIGS. 11A to 11C. It has two board connector boxes for the relay and the heating coil respectively. In a similar manner to the above embodiment, the high voltage switchboard is constructed with the high voltage relays and the electronic circuit-type heating coils. In the embodiment shown in FIGS. 11A to 11C, the relay box and the heating coil box are constructed with one high voltage switch board and the relay board and the heating 1cb139a0ed
