Virtual Classroom pilot, and Sarah Milstein, the pilot teacher whose school, Framingham High, is now using the LMS. Zach and Sarah give an overview of the project and the learning experiences for the 8th, 9th, and 10th grades they've tested with. Highlights of "Do You Know?" include: The students had less problems accessing the site, and were able to navigate more efficiently. Students were able to quickly upload academic work that meant they were able to participate more efficiently. When students encountered a blockage or a problem accessing their work, the teacher was able to easily and automatically get them logged in and help them get back to work. We've been trying out zoom for homework and mid-year projects. It's amazing. Sarah made the decision to move towards using zoom for the summer. I was happy to discover that they would only have to log in once to use zoom during the year. By the end of the summer, everyone in the class was comfortable with zoom. There were very few problems; three or four, all small and easily corrected. Once zoom was set up, the students were able to switch to "legacy" Adobe Flash which had a similar interface to zoom and was easier to use. Sarah's two biggest issues were with Photoshop and Illustrator, the two most robust Adobe applications. The LMS still serves as the place for students to register and sign-up for projects; the system couldn't be used for much more than that. Zach and Sarah are now piloting

The application of the decomposition technique to the age-period-cohort (APC) model requires a three-dimensional extension of the decomposition technique described in chapter 4. This extension is based on the decomposition of the age-period-cohort model into a linear age cohort, linear period, and linear age-period model. Details are given in the following paragraphs. ... 6.11) Application of the decomposition to the age-period-cohort, country-year-year and within-country-year, period effects, and duration model Introduction This chapter contains two applications of the decomposition technique developed in chapter 4.
