Field of the Invention This invention relates to an improved electromagnetic relay having a plunger movable in opposition to a stationary core by the action of an electromagnet, and more particularly to a relay having a structure free from play of the solenoid coil. 2. Description of the Prior Art In an electromagnetic relay wherein a plunger engages with a core by the action of a solenoid coil, the coil is normally held in place by a set screw with a set square being inserted into an axial bore of the coil to hold the coil. However, it is impossible to insert a set square into the axial bore of a coil having a complicated structure and therefore, it is impossible to accurately hold the coil in place. In addition, in the case of a relay having a coil, an assembling method is complicated since the coil is made of an insulating material, such as epoxy resin, and a set square is attached to the coil after the assembly of the coil into an actuator. Netscape 1.0 released - muhfuhkuh ===== exDM69 This was interesting reading. I remember the web as pre-HTML and the www becoming the standard protocol for accessing pages. Other than that I remember nothing. I think I was born at the end of this phase so I wasn't around when the web was born. It's great to see that simple example which has spawned a lot of other services. --- pavs > I think I was born at the end of this phase so I wasn't around when the
