Eine große Gastronomie-Eröffnung in Karlsruhe.Q: Cross-thread DLL call in COM Is it possible to do this? I want to create a DLL in C++ and call it from a C# application. The C++ code is working. If I call this code from a C# application it throws the following exception: "Cross-thread operation not valid: Control 'richTextBox2' accessed from a thread other than the thread it was created on." Even if I call the DLL from a another C++ application, I get this same exception. Is this something that can be done in COM? A: You can't call code from a DLL from a different thread. Use the same thread that the DLL was called from. Super glutathione peroxidase activity in human stratum corneum: a minor transport protein distinct from the classic selenoproteins. Stratum corneum has been shown to actively synthesize melanin, and also possesses a number of enzymatic and nonenzymatic antioxidant defense systems. The covalent cross-linking associated with the latter isomerases the tryptophan residue of a subunit into a cross-link product with the overall effect of increasing the functional capacity of the enzyme. These isomerases have been termed selenoproteins because of their selenium-containing active site. We have expressed a recombinant GST fusion protein in Escherichia coli with a proline-rich C-terminal sequence associated with cross-linking activity in human stratum corneum. This recombinant fusion protein, designated glutathione peroxidase (GPX-His6), was purified using affinity chromatography and characterized by ligand blotting and protein sequencing. Whereas covalent linkage of melanocytes is an ongoing reaction in human stratum corneum, analogous covalent linkage in GPX-His6 is lacking in an indication that melanocytes are not present. This recombinant 570a42141b
