Direct inhibition of Trk-B by a novel oral preparation, KW-2471, inhibits growth of malignant gliomas without toxicity to normal cells. The trk receptor tyrosine kinase is highly expressed in various types of cancer and has recently become an attractive therapeutic target. Previously, we reported that KW-2471, a novel oral preparation of quinolizidine, directly and selectively inhibited the growth of colonic cancer cells expressing high levels of Trk-B, while displaying minimal toxicity to normal human colonic cells. In this study, we investigated the effects of KW-2471 on the growth of a number of brain tumours, including primary glioblastomas, anaplastic astrocytomas, glioblastoma stem-like cells (GSC), and GSC/normal glial co-culture. We found that KW-2471 directly inhibited the growth of various types of brain tumour cells expressing high levels of Trk-B, but not normal human astrocytes, with IC(50) values in the low micromolar range, without showing any toxicity to normal human glial cells. The growth inhibitory effects of KW-2471 on brain tumour cells were reversed by the addition of exogenous recombinant Trk-B, indicating that KW-2471 directly inhibited the growth of Trk-B-expressing brain tumour cells. In addition, we found that Trk-B expression was high in GSCs of malignant gliomas, and that the growth of GSCs was strongly inhibited by KW-2471 in the presence of normal human astrocytes, suggesting that the inhibit 3e33713323
