I'm new to this library and am struggling to find any documentation on how to make user-defined types available to clients. I'm working with an array of these: CREATE TYPE employee AS ( id integer, name text, start_date timestamp, end_date timestamp, department text, date_joined timestamp, LOCATION text ); but don't understand how to access the row field values. I've tried: select * from employees; but that just returns the entire row object. As I'm trying to do so on a different connection to the one I created the data type on, how can I get the row id? A: Only the connect which created this type is allowed to use this type. To use it, connect have to use CREATE TYPE using type_name of the same name as in CREATE TYPE. Example: CREATE TYPE employee AS ( id integer, name text, start_date timestamp, end_date timestamp, department text, date_joined timestamp, LOCATION text ); Works on my SQL-Server: Q: CREATE TYPE employee AS (id integer) A: CREATE TYPE [schema].[type_name] AS (id integer) Note: Requires PostgreSQL 9.1 or later. Q: Which static compiler should I use with OpenOffice? I am trying to compile an application which uses some static libraries that I have developed. I have downloaded the following static compilers. 1) compiler: openoffice 3.1 I have tried to compile it but I am unable 82138339de
