Conservatives have been sounding the alarm about rising corporate taxes and so-called “corporate inversions” for years. Well, those warnings may finally be paying off for President Donald Trump, as the president-elect pushed President Barack Obama to lower the 35 percent corporate tax rate on Thursday afternoon. In a meeting with the president-elect, Obama has reportedly agreed to significantly lower the corporate tax rate. “The president-elect and I have a great deal of respect for each other and worked together very well during the campaign. I’m proud that America has one of the lowest tax rates in the world,” Obama said, according to Bloomberg. Obama previously made it clear that he would veto the Republican tax cut legislation, which would have reduced the corporate tax rate to 20 percent. The GOP’s tax bill would have also eliminated the estate tax, a policy that would’ve prevented executives from cashing out their wealth by living off their country club bougie lifestyle while leaving behind the kids to struggle to make ends meet. The biggest beneficiary of Obama’s decision would be business owners who pay the highest marginal tax rate, who would’ve seen their rates steadily drop over the years of Obama’s presidency.
