We have in the past demonstrated that serum concentrations of the HDL protein, apoprotein A-1, are significantly lower in coronary artery disease (CAD) patients than in normal controls and that apoprotein A-1 levels are inversely related to serum cholesterol. In addition, since our laboratory has isolated and characterized a serum factor termed "HDL-regulating substance" (HRS), which is capable of lowering HDL in a dose-dependent fashion, the relationship between CAD and HRS was also explored. The relationship between HRS and cholesterol metabolism in the circulation was studied by comparing levels of HRS activity in sera of healthy subjects who consumed diets of a high or low total cholesterol content.

Finally, we propose to examine the "effect" of CAD on the composition of lipoproteins in the blood. Specifically, we hope to determine whether the lipid and protein moieties of lipoproteins are altered in CAD and whether these changes relate to cholesterol metabolism. How To Create The Perfect Coffee Ice Cream The latest entry in the frosty, creamy world of coffee ice cream In my last post, I mentioned two other coffee ice cream recipes you might try, and there are a lot more out there. I really had no idea how popular this particular dessert is. There is even a website devoted to recipes for coffee ice cream. Of course, no one should be using a recipe from a website devoted to coffee ice cream unless she wants to eat a bowl of oatmeal. These recipes might be more forgiving, but they still have strict dos and don'ts. This recipe is my favorite, simply 3e33713323
