which books to read for my non-math or physics related coursework? I am currently a third year student studying mathematics in the UK. I am doing a non-math or non-physics related coursework. It's not maths or physics, so we do not get a choice of what to read for our coursework. Is there any literature that has been published by professional mathematicians and physicists in order to motivate learners to choose maths or physics related topics for their coursework? Or is it just another book
