HISTORY. ANIMA (continued)
Nazaradhar, Safiya, Farida, Dana, Tatiana. Animation It was an ordinary village inhabited by peasants. Nazaradhar stood out among them. He was an intelligent and educated man, so everyone in the village respected him. So on his birthday all the family members, friends and neighbors came. All was well, but suddenly Nazaradhar felt tired and asked to be moved to the bed. The guests were surprised, for normally he was alert and cheerful. After an hour he fell asleep and did not wake up. Before he died, he stayed up all night and all morning. He died at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, six hours after it was offered to him. I asked him what he said when it was offered to him. He replied, "I said it wasn't for me, that it was too far from my chair." But he didn't know what he would do if that happened. He didn't know how it was going to happen. I asked him how he died. He replied, "I went to bed, and the pain went away. I went to sleep, and the pain was gone, too. I woke up and it was bad again. I saw that I was lying on the floor. I had been lying on the floor for hours. I got up and saw that it was still dark. I realized that another night had passed. I went downstairs again to look at my watch. I don't remember if I looked at my watch anymore. When I looked at it again, it was already light. I looked at it again, and it turned out that half a day had passed. I tried to get up, but I couldn't. I had as much strength as a newborn kitten. I realized I couldn't get up. I lay down on the floor again and fell asleep. When I woke up, I found my room flooded with sunshine. I took a shower, put on clean clothes and headed to school. But it was closed. I looked in through the windows and didn't see a living soul. I walked around the building four times and finally made sure that the school was really closed. Now I knew for sure I was right. I knew I was crazy, but at the same time I felt I had to go home.

From that moment on, I knew I was crazy. And I knew what I had to do. I had to run away from her.

She wasn't supposed to get into my life. I wasn't supposed to let her into my life. From that moment on, I wasn't Ken anymore. From that moment on, I became me. We were different people now, and I had to leave. This fall, I won't be the same. I became different. I became crazy. When she was around, I wasn't me. I was Ken. I was the one she loved. And I was happy. Happy like Ken. Happy like her. Happy like us together. Happy like us.
