That said, its a weird kind of hash, and I have never seen that. Dont look for information online, or try googling how to find this version (2.0.0.0) /* eslint no-unused-vars:0 */ import React from'react'; import {Button} from '././'; import {Styles} from '././'; export class ConditionalButton extends React.Component { render() { const {props} = this; return ( {props.children} ); } } export const BaseButton = styled(ConditionalButton)` margin: 20px 0 10px 0; &:first-of-type { margin-top: 10px; } `; Q: How to open a new tab when user clicks on a link in BeautifulSoup I'm using BeautifulSoup to parse a PDF417 barcode from a web page and I wanted to open a new tab when the user clicks the link. I'm using try-catch to catch errors in my program. The way I designed my program is that it is split between a number of .js files (JS-Files), which I link to my HTML-file from a main.js file. In my main.js I try to access an object in my index.html file, but I don't know how to do this because I try to access a function that is in another JS file.
main.js
var container = document.getElementById("container");
var friend = new Friend("1234");
Friend.prototype.defineName = function(n){ console.log("test");
var newname = "New" + n;
console.log(this.name, newname);
return newname; };
friend.defineName();
index.html
