I have a method, GetAll, which gets an array of items out of the repository and returns it to the service: public IEnumerable GetAll(IEnumerable IDs) { return _context.Items.Where(x => IDs.Contains(x.ID)) .OrderBy(x => x.ID).ToList(); } I have no problem setting up my test, I simply want to get it to

return a collection of 100 randomly created items. This is my test: var expected = new List(); //Arrange var contextMock = new Mock();
contextMock.Setup(ctx =>
ctx.Items.OrderBy(x => Guid.NewGuid()).
ToList()).Returns(expected);
contextMock.Setup(ctx => ctx.Items).Returns(expected); var itemRepository = new Mock();

a variable I want to show the results of a loop in a variable. This is my query: q = connect().cursor() result = q.execute("SELECT * FROM file") I want to take the result into a variable like this: for x in result: print(x) This gives me TypeError: 'NoneType' object is unsubscriptable. A: Turn result into a list, then loop through that: result = q.execute("SELECT * FROM file") print(list(result)) # to check that it got populated for x in result: print(x)

Binding of Cytotoxic and Noncytotoxic Carbonyl Compounds to Peroxiredoxin II. A promising line of research in chemical biology is the design of agents that would induce protein oxidation by acting on a specific protein in a spatial context. This article is aimed at showing how circular dichroism studies may guide the design of carbonyl-based compounds capable of binding to target proteins. A model system has been chosen to examine the interactions between peroxiredoxin II (PrxII) and two different classes of carbonyl compounds, aldehydes and nitroxides. Circular dichroism spectroscopy measurements were carried out to investigate their binding. The binding constant was determined by spectrofluorometry and was in the range of $10(3)$ - $10(4)$ M⁽⁻¹⁾. This range is of interest for the design of agents that might represent interesting leads in the development of non-toxic anticancer compounds. Moreover, in silico experiments reveal the involvement of specific domains of PrxII protein in the interaction with these compounds. If you are using the SensioFrameworkExtraBundle as a third-party dependency, you may encounter a bug in version 2.6.0. If you would like to downgrade to the previous version you may just run the following command in the Symfony Console: `php symfony doctrine:d-ban` I would recommend that you to use the beta version instead: `php symfony doctrine:d-`
