® Story Archives & Inspirations Daily Wonder This Is the Place A Powerful Message by Jack Can I wanted to write a post specially about my new novel, ‘This Is The Place’, which is the story of a love affair between a boy and girl living in the aftermath of the Great War. In the novel I have tried to give a very personal insight into what happened to both the people involved in the love affair. The English writer, Jack Canick, was one of the greats of the 20th century and was the author of many novels including ‘The General Danced at Dawn’ and the autobiographical ‘The Impossible Life’. He fought in the Great War and came through the experience unscathed, but the impact of this was, he said, “like a blow-torch to the ear. It makes me ache for the doomed and the damned in every part of the world.” In 1928 he began work on ‘The End of the War’, a nearly 2,000-page story of the events leading up to and following the end of the Great War, that he later believed to be his masterpiece. ‘This Is The Place’, the novel published in 1939, was the first book of his to be written in response to the story he had started to tell in his imagination. After the war, he wrote the autobiographical novel ‘The Impossible Life’, which won him the New York Herald Tribune prize for the best autobiographical novel written in the United States in 1938. That winter he settled in a little white cottage on a villa in Zardecia on the island of Corfu, where he lived a simple and peaceful life with his wife. The war was not yet over but, so it seemed, they had survived the worst. However, in 1942 there was an Italian air raid and the villa was destroyed. Evicted from Corfu, Jack and Edna settled in a little cottage near the village of Stefanaki. At this time he had a story to finish, and began working on the project that was to become known as ‘This Is The Place’. In 2013, I read an interview with Jack Canick by his son Nicholas, where he told the story of the making of ‘This Is The Place’. What follows is a very condensed version of it. ‘This Is

The court in the southwestern province of Jizan found that Loujain al-Hathloul, 26, from neighboring Medina, had “publishing rumors about the Islamic authorities and their weak leadership and causing chaos”. Human rights groups had expressed concern about the verdict, which it said flouted international conventions on freedom of expression, and said Loujain’s ordeal was only one of several facing women for exercising their rights to access a legal profession, pursue education and seek work. The Saudi Human Rights Commission, which has closely monitored Loujain’s case, said she was ordered to pay a fine of 4,800 riyals ($1
