Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to a decorative light bulb holder and, more particularly, to a decorative light bulb holder for the interior of automotive vehicles having various decorative sections such as various selected scenes that are automatically displayed sequentially or continuously in the light bulb holder. 2. Description of the Prior Art The interior of modern automotive vehicles is in a state of decorative arts in order to increase the comfort and pleasure of the driver. The interior of the vehicle is usually provided with an interior light for illuminating a road sign, an edge of a road, an oncoming vehicle, an illuminated round-shaped parking symbol or the like. In most vehicles, the interior light is mounted to a front pillar or a backside of a dashboard. The interior light is generally a compact bulb, such as a halogen bulb, the light of which is concentrated in a limited direction, or a combination bulb, such as a compact bulb-high pressure mercury bulb and a halogen bulb

Q: How to link qcow2 to offset within file I wrote an image using qemu-img with the following command: `qemu-img create -f qcow2 myimage.qcow2 -O qcow2 -o blocksize=1m` The outputted image has some garbage at the beginning (which is the total size of my disk minus the image size). I then attempted to overwrite the beginning of the disk using the following command: `qemu-img convert myimage.qcow2 myimage_empty.qcow2 -O qcow2` But qemu-img complains that the image size can't be changed. The image is then shown as empty and I'm able to open it using filemanager. How can I re-write the beginning of an image so that I can link it to a specific offset within the file? A: As the documentation on the -O option says: OVERWRITE : Overwrite the image with the specified file If you want to overwrite from the beginning, just omit that option: `qemu-img convert -f qcow2 myimage.qcow2 myimage_empty.qcow2` and do not specify the -O qcow2 at all.

Q: Confusion on w/v ratio of organic materials Please forgive me, I'm trying to learn chemistry but I'm confused. From this resource, 2 parts of sodium carbonate are mixed with 3 parts of citric acid and heated at 200 degrees F for 2 hours. When the final solution is cooled at room temperature, the w/v ratio of the final solution, is said to be 4.5. I know that the w/v ratio is the weight of one molecule of water for one molecule of solute, but in this case, shouldn't the w/v be 3/4 because there's twice as many molecules of citric acid as the molecules of water?
