Features Key:

- Simple controls with one key to start
- Experienced game mechanic with a mix of roguelike and resource management aspects
- Max Level conditions, which will speed up the game

Mission:

The barber is on a secret mission to see the world and try out all the fashion trends from all the major cities. Your mission will be to accompany him on his journey and help him to cut and style haircuts. Of course, you will also be doing so to avoid the temptation of bringing a friend.

Our Thoughts:

- Always good to have a "guide" in a game, which keeps the randomness to a minimum - the alternative you too long.
 - The game would benefit greatly with unlimited hair styles, so this becomes a bit of a task at the end of level, requiring the Barber and the Style Thief to collaborate.

Technical stuff:

- Hud: An advanced visualization for level and now also enemy distances and chances of hitting.
- Map: A forced refresh of the map screen, which renders the new map data as it comes in.
- Level: A system which will set a max level and moves the plot forward accordingly

Next:

- Hair Physics!
- Misc.

Q: Conjugacy classes of finite group of units in \mathbb{R} I am reading a paper of Patrick Dehornoy and by that I would like to clarify some definition and two facts. The first fact is that if (G, \cdot) is a finite group of units in \mathbb{R} then G is isomorphic to $(\mathbb{R}/\mathbb{Z}, +_{\mathbb{Z}})$ where $+_{\mathbb{Z}}$ is addition in \mathbb{Z} and G is generated by its elements of order 2. This was stated in the paper but I did not find a proof. Could someone give me a reference? I do not expect this result but this is just a curiosity for me. The second fact is that for $(\mathbb{R} \setminus \mathbb{Z}, +_{\mathbb{Z}})$ the set $\mathcal{C} = \{1, -1\}$ of conjugacy classes is infinite. This was again stated in the paper but a reference was not given. Could someone give me a reference? A: Fact 1: Let \mathbb{Z}

At first, you will be playing a Barbra Streisand in 1960's television show. As you play the game, you'll begin to explore and learn about her life. The art style is cartoonish, and is unlike anything else. It's strange, yet strikingly beautiful. It isn't a very long game, but can be finished in 5-10 hours. My biggest issue with it is that the controls are not very consistent or easy to use. I feel like there was some sort of accidental wheel or thumbstick that is a mismatch. At times, I couldn't move in-game characters, or switch characters by tapping the back touchpad on the Xbox One controller. What's new in Bizarre Barber:

Lacks the Chutzpah To Admit It The media is full of conflicting stories emanating from the bizarre removal and arrest of Arizona State basketball coach Lute Olson. Even Fox News picked up on the story and neither of the mainstream conservative voices had more than a few choice words to say. Meanwhile, talk radio was abuzz with talk about how President Obama will have to wrap up that summit in Arizona and move on. The only thing missing is the mainstream media running with the schoolyard story that Olson's NAACP-alleged racism had something to do with the decision to fire his squad. A membership of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People demanded Olson's resignation and provided this letter and communication as evidence which Olson and State Fair officials simply denied was genuine. The "evidence" proves nothing. The Tucson Student was the first mainstream media outlet to sweep the incident under the rug and leave the public with no other option than to believe that there is absolutely no credible substance to the Olson story. Even the seasoned members of the media were flummoxed by what in the hell on earth was going on at State Fair. But today's Sanford School of Public Policy student was able to provide some much-needed clarity on at least one aspect of the sordid case by fact-checking the very letter that ignited the crazy. The letter simply reads: 27. A member of NAACP believes that the numerous racist statements made by Olson over the years justifies his failure to continue to represent Arizona State University and Arizona State Basketball. He has spoken to Arizona State University officials about the replacement of Olson. 28. Arizona State University does not wish to be identified by name in the case, but has since stated that it is unwilling to tolerate either racism or the use of racist rhetoric by a member of its basketball coaching staff. 29.

Arizona State University officials and representatives of NAACP recently discussed the matter of Olson's contract and his punishment. Ultimately, NAACP did not have any objection to the cancellation of Olson's contract. 30. The matter was left to me, as the chair of NAACP in Arizona, to ask the ASU Athletic Director to remove Olson from his position. 31. The Athletic Director advised me to not contact anyone else in ASU in the matter. 32. The Athletic Director also asked that I sign a letter to Olson indicating my phone call to him to discuss his firing.
