Field of the Invention The invention relates generally to a semi-automatic and/or automatic firearm and, more specifically, to a semi-automatic or automatic firearm for loading ammunition cartridges into a magazine of the firearm. 2. Description of the Prior Art In semi-automatic and automatic firearms, frequently an ammunition cartridge is automatically loaded into the firearm by means of a loading magazine as the last step of the firing process. In most instances the loading magazine is a pusher-type magazine, which holds a plurality of ammunition cartridges in place against a ramp. The last cartridge in the magazine is moved in a direction parallel to the direction of the front end of the magazine by the force of a spring element or driving pin. A trigger is pivoted forward and is moved back at the same time by the mechanism into the path of the ammunition cartridge to be fired. Thus, the firearm loads the ammunition cartridge. In addition to the spring-type or driving pin-type magazine, there is a possibility to use a rotary magazine for ammunition cartridges. In this case, a rotor is disposed in the magazine which is driven in a rotary manner about an axis extending parallel to the longitudinal direction of the magazine. When the rotary magazine has been rotated to a certain extent, the rotary magazine slides into the firearm and the ammunition cartridge is moved into the firing chamber. During the process, in which the rotary magazine moves into the firearm, the ammunition cartridge that was standing at the beginning of the movement into the firearm is displaced from the rotor out of the magazine and must subsequently be inserted into the magazine again. This is accomplished by a relatively complicated process requiring many manual operations. It must be ensured that the last ammunition cartridge or the ammunition cartridge to be fired is positioned exactly in the firing chamber. Frequently, the process is relatively inaccurate and the operational reliability may not be readily ensured. More than two years ago, former U.S. Olympic gymnastics coach Jon Schottenheimer pleaded guilty to possessing child pornography and was sentenced to 10 years' probation. The five-foot-four-inch, 110-pound Schottenheimer, who was fired by USA Gymnastics in 2012, also pleaded guilty to a charge of sexually exploiting his daughters, ages 6 and 8, and his wife's daughters, ages 10 and 12. The oncoprotein E6 from human papillomavirus-18 immortalizes primary human keratinocytes by the interaction with the E6-AP protein. The E6-induced immortalization is due to the disruption of the pRb-E2F pathway through the interaction of E6 with the pRb protein, a key player of the regulation of the cell cycle. Here we demonstrate that E6-AP causes E6/E6AP-dependent phosphorylation of the p53 tumor suppressor protein. The E6/E6AP-induced p53 phosphorylation leads to an enhanced p53-dependent transcription. However, although E6-AP increases p53 activity, this is dependent on E6-mediated disruption of the pRb-E2F pathway.userCode) nameToUserMap.put(userCode, userCode); String[] localizatoinCodes = Locale.getAvailableLocaleNames(); for (int i = 0; i
