Only .Q: Parse JSON response in php and convert to associative array I am working on showing content from JSON files. The JSON file has name and image keys. I want to do something like this If the JSON file has name the output will be Name. But if it has image, the output will be name with an image like like this, name.jpg So, the json response may look like this {"name":"xyz","image":"xyz.jpg"} or {"name":"xyz","image":"abc.jpg"} I tried to fetch the data from JSON like this and there is no associative array: $json = file_get_contents(""); $data = json_decode($json); echo $data->name; How to get the values for json keys. A: Two ways to do it: 1. Using array keys $array = json_decode($json, true); echo $array['name']; // or $data = json_decode($json); echo $data['name']; 2. Using object notation $array = json_decode($json); echo $array->name; // or $data = json_decode($json); echo $data->name; Have a look at the manual json_decode documentation A: Just add an extra line for the $data to be an associative array of keys and value pairs: $data = json_decode($json, true); $data = array_merge($data, ['name' => null, 'image' => null,]); // print out first key echo $data['name']; // print out first key with no value echo $data['image']; Archive I recently suggested that the rise of academic robots and genomic physicians could cause
