I googled for it, but apparently all I found was that Japan got this game for a window sill and I was wondering what other countries got. I have an idea for an enemy card mechanic in an RPG. The characters in a town can be reduced in number when an enemy attacks them or when the town loses a battle against an enemy. An enemy can reduce the number of enemies by defeating them. At some point, the enemy will reduce the number of enemies to none. The trick is that the more enemies you have, the more powerful the enemy is and the more damage he can do. I could also modify this mechanic for villages, towns, dungeons. The enemy could go beyond this and change things on the world such as seasons and weather. I'm just
