Why is this important? Because through this we get a deeper understanding of the natural movement of players on the pitch. The movement of the players is so key to the tactical and strategic decision making of the game. The players are at their best when they are on top of their game, and this can only be achieved through the natural movement of the players to create a more authentic, more responsive and more fun game. How do we do it? The movement of players in FIFA is something we have studied for many years. The FIFA and Exocar teams spend a lot of time analyzing the real-life movements of players. We work closely with the world's leading academics and researchers to understand these movements. Then we use their findings to improve the player movements in FIFA. To understand how this impacts the game, read this important piece on PlayerBehaviour.com: What does this mean for FIFA? We have spent many years doing this research, gathering the data and now it's time to make the change and see it in game. These advances, combined with the next generation of player behaviour algorithms, use the rich data gathered through the gameplay to make authentic, more responsive game-play. How will this impact on game play and on skill level in FIFA? There are various ways we are able to capture this data and we will use this new technology to make game play more realistic, more responsive and more fun. We have also introduced a new "Skill Stick" that tells you what players need to work on in order to improve their FIFA skills. Read more on how this makes gameplay more strategic and tactical in our FIFA Blog. This feature is great for players that want to improve their gameplay. There are certain parts of the game (such as the player movement) that we can capture that will help improve the player's skill level. We are able to capture all of the key features that impact player play and movement. What about the animations? We have made a number of improvements to the player animations and they are more representative of the realism we aim for. We work closely with the animation teams on FIFA to ensure that our animations are improved. We also monitor the movement and actions of real players in real life to ensure our animations are accurate. We will be adding more animations to our game over time to make FIFA even more realistic. In the meantime, our improvements to the player animation will help give you
