The advanced motion capture suits the game uses are inspired by the first generation of those used in the movie 300, which were worn by the Spartans in the film. Those suits were worn by the Spartans in the last scenes of the film, representing the players who were injured in the film's quest to reach the top of the mountain. Similarly, the FIFA 22 motion capture suits have been developed to represent the players who actually put in the effort and took part in the motion capture process that helped make the game. The FIFA team captured movements in motion capture suits on the pitch, in order to create a range of new gameplay animations and the new dynamic player movement engine, the "Fluid Movement System". This system gives each player an appropriate level of displacement in gameplay. Therefore, players are able to counter attacks with the ball, make timely decisions and demonstrate more appropriate movement in addition to the signature movement animations. The system takes into account headings, momentum, speed and direction of movement. "Each player will be able to use their own style and body language," commented Christian Gerritsma, Lead Designer of FIFA's Future Development team. "Like the previous game, we will support a wide range of signature player animations. These will help players develop their individual play styles and more importantly, will help them feel authentic. The sheer number of players we have enlisted for the project is reason to believe that we will include a truly diverse set of animations." To provide the most authentic football experience, players can now tackle, move through tackles and pick the ball up after falling to the ground. Players will also receive a more agile fighting system and a new stamina bar to show a player's physical condition. "The aim of FIFA 22 is to include every aspect of football in a single game. For this to happen, we will need to capture the additional movement data from the real-life players," explained Christian Gerritsma. "In order to be as authentic as possible, our motion capture data will be used to power the game's movements. The fluid movement system ensures players move realistically around their opponent. We have also significantly improved the sprinting and tackling. Players can now sprint forward, backwards and sideways, and hit the ground at specific speeds and angles." The new generation of boots, also introduced with FIFA 22, have also been designed with close consultation from renowned

FIFA Fans: You can find @FIFA on Twitter Other News: FIFA on Twitter How to use your FIFA Ultimate Team in FIFA 22 and 23 Play your best Football matches with your favorite players in this season's FIFA If you want to play soccer in another country during the FIFA season, such as Brazil, Japan, or Mexico, then you can play as a Club's local team in FIFA Ultimate Team. Your club is your equivalent of a country's national team, but with your own management style. Using your FIFA Ultimate Team account, when you log into the game, you can transfer your Ultimate Team players to a club that is in your country. When you start a match, the local team will play your Ultimate Team team. Your Ultimate Team club can play with the same strengths and weaknesses as any other club. All Ultimate Team players from the country will show on the squad screen, but only those that are available in the country will show in the game. To play as another country's team, you will need to transfer Ultimate Team players to the region (Greece, Japan, etc.) for that specific country. You can then transfer your Ultimate Team players back to FIFA, but you will lose any progress in the transfer. To use players from another country, you will need to receive permission from that country's organizing body. For example, if your country is host, it would be your national team. However, if the country is not host, it would be the country holding the FIFA World Cup. You will need to contact FIFA's Club licensing department to request your national team to be able to use players

What's new:

- FIFA 22 brings hyper-realistic ways to play the game, with new responsive controls that improve the balance of responsiveness for players, particularly defenders, and ball control for attacking players.
- Career Mode: with Hyper Motion technology, appear more lithe and explosive on the ball, more aware of where your next move is coming from, and react more aggressively to chaos.
