Method 1. Preheat the oven to 200C/180C Fan/Gas Mark 6. 2. Peel the carrots and cut into strips about the thickness of a shortbread, then cut into 2.5cm squares. Put a layer of chicken stock in a shallow dish, cover with the carrot, then press down slightly. Repeat the layers. 3. Mix the egg, cream, honey, mustard and salt together in a bowl, then spread on top of the carrots. Scatter the dill over the top. 4. Bake for 1 hour, then turn the heat down to 150C/130C/Gas Mark 5 and continue baking for 2 hours, or until the carrots are very soft.

Ads by Google Comments, questions and tips Comments (27) Toby Foulds Says: 23/09/14 Excellent Carrots which are soft but not mushy. I found that I had to cook the carrots for twice as long as stated by Helbig, or the carrots would be too soft. I did not add any cream so would use 1 egg in place of the 2 recommended and it was just sufficient. Zachary Walters Says: 23/09/14 I've made this recipe now on two occasions using different carrots. The first time I had a really soft carrot and cooked the carrot mixture for about 20 mins. The second time the carrots were a little firm which meant they cooked for about 25 mins. The first time I used three eggs and it worked out great, the second time I used two. Elizabeth Gardner Says: 21/09/14 I thoroughly enjoyed this recipe and would definitely
