I am working on a web app where users can interact with each other. I have a table that shows all the users in a chatroom. Each row of the table contains a checkbox that shows who else is in the room. I am trying to get the following functionality: If nobody is checked the message box is hidden. If everyone is checked the message box is shown. If you are the only person in the room, make the message box hidden. I am not sure if I should be using jQuery or Javascript. The code I have is as follows: NameTime John $('#checkbox').change(function(){ if($('.checkbox:checked').length == 1){ $("#message").hide(); } else { $("#message").show(); } }); If I am the only one in the room, I want the message box to hide. If I am not alone, I want the message box to stay. I am not sure how to implement this in either jQuery or javascript. A: Just put some logic in the change function to detect if it is the first time they clicked on the checkbox and then hide the message. $('#checkbox').change(function(){ if($(this).is(':checked

Allows one to easily customize numerous advanced Internet Explorer settings from within a single, simple to use interface. Install Internet Explorer Tweaker, create a free account and create one or more profiles. Each profile can be configured independently and you can also apply a single profile to multiple IE instances. See the full add-on setup instructions here: students are not embarrassed about how much they do at school, but the conversation is more likely to start when they aren't in school. A recent study from the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence found that as children get older, their embarrassment about "being bad" at something goes away, though their worries about their ability to cope with a situation do not. As they move into adolescence, teens appear to worry less about not being good at something and feel less embarrassment about it. The study, conducted by psychologists Ben Bucknam and Kim Dickson-Swift at the University of Minnesota, found that the average 11-year-old thought of himself as good at something every four minutes. This slowed down to two or three times a day by the time children reach puberty. By 14, it had slowed to a couple of minutes every few days. Most kids don't think of themselves as idiots until they enter their early 20s.Q: Как зачистить кеш при компиляции css в sass? Как зачистить кеш при компиляции css в sass?
