(WCCO) — A Roseville mother has been charged with thirddegree criminal sexual conduct after her 5-year-old son told police that she had been having sex with him for a long time. Police began investigating Julie Shenefelt and her son's claims after medical officials said the child had three separate injuries. On Sept. 12, the family drove to a health clinic in Burnsville where the child told a nurse Shenefelt was having sex with him, according to charges. Officers said the child told them Shenefelt "layed down in his bed and started touching him around his belly and lower parts, and he said (she) touched him in the front, back and legs." When officers began searching Shenefelt's home, they said they found a box of lubricant and a box of sex toys. Officers said the child described what Shenefelt did to him and said she wanted to keep him a secret. He told police Shenefelt had tried to trick him into thinking he was asleep so she could have sex with him. Shenefelt admitted to having sex with the child, but not in the way he described, according to charges. Shenefelt said she "did not offer the child anything for sex because she had no intention of having sex with the child," according to charges. Shenefelt said she sometimes kissed the boy, but he never gave her sex because "he didn't want to." Shenefelt also said that her son's injury was caused by a bicycle accident. Shenefelt is now free after posting $15,000 bail. An Amber alert has been issued for her and her son.
