Q: WPF data binding I'm quite new to WPF, and for my first lesson with this framework i'm trying to add a list of strings from the "modules" field of my Database to a ListView control. Somethings are going well, i can only display the values corresponding to the TextBox of the current textbox (that is, i only bind objects to the textBox), but I cant seem to bind to any of the ListView control for some reason. Anyone can help me out here? EDIT: Here's a part of my current XAML, where I try to bind to the ListView. This one is just a piece of the whole XAML.

The study shows that an estimated $23 billion to $29 billion, or 2% to 3%, of PPI revenue was not based on actual payments. PPI — also known as loan charge or "interest-only" payments — are separate payments made by homeowners. They cover part of the cost of owning a home — typically the interest on a mortgage — plus a portion of principal paid by a borrower. PPI are more popular than they should be, since many banks have added them to their mortgages without informing the borrower. Most of the PPI amounts that banks report to investors, the authors say, are so small that they are essentially inconsequential. But they are still key to revenue at many banks, due to accounting rules that mean nearly all PPI payments must d41b202975
