I have this other custom recipe that I want to call in my bitbake.conf: IMAGE_INSTALL_append = " apt-get"

The first line is the package manager, the second one is to install the image dependencies. The problem is I can only call a image with images.bitbake, not with image recipe. How do I add the azure API to my bitbake? I added the following configuration to the kernel I'm working on: IMAGE_INSTALL_append = " apt-get" RDEPENDS_${PN} += " acpid" RDEPENDS_${PN} += " apmd" RDEPENDS_${PN} += " apmd" I also put some acpi devices in my block, but when I run bitbake my kernel I get the following error: ERROR: image recipe'myimage' has a failed dependency: Error executing command amzn-utils -n 9 ERROR: Could not import target 'Image()' for project 'ImageRecipe' A: I've found the solution: Make sure you have the address of the 0cc13bf012

PRIVATE WORKS DEPARTMENTImplicit Memory in Patients with Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis and in Spouses of ALS Patients. A national laboratory-based study was conducted in order to examine differences in event-based implicit memory as measured by the dot-probe paradigm, in a sample of ALS patients with and without cognitive impairment and in spouses of patients with ALS and of healthy subjects. In addition, we investigated the relationship between memory and illness severity. ALS patients with cognitive impairment have difficulty with event-based implicit memory. Their findings in the dot-probe task were similar to those of patients with aMCI and controls. Implicit memory in spouses of patients with ALS is relatively preserved. We can conclude that event-based implicit memory should be assessed also in the context of neurological illnesses like ALS. Implicit memory in spouses of patients with ALS is relatively preserved. Future studies should examine the mechanisms underlying memory deficits in patients with ALS and spouses of patients with ALS.Woman swallows fruit seeds – later cat owner The day that a young lady lost her dignity as her next door neighbour cooked a fruit in her mouth, that would have surely turned a dog's head in disgust. It was a normal Saturday morning, everything was fine. Then, the air burst out in bits and that made the lady start swallowing. But, that didn't stop her; she continued to swallow and swallow all that she got. Her neighbour didn't know what to do. People were running inside and outside of their homes. Everyone was running, screaming and yelling. The neighbours were trying to wake the lady and were holding the mouth open, but the lady seemed to be in a deep sleep. Finally, the lady woke up and looked at the man desperately. Then, she opened her mouth and asked him to get some saline water. The lady kept swallowing the water, but the neighbours could tell that she was a patient. The lady seemed to be saved and a cat owner walked inside and gave her some fruits to eat. She ate the fruits with a smile. She swallowed three fruits and looked at her owner happily. The cat owner was surprised when people started commenting. They kept on exclaiming that they would have never accepted someone eating fruits in the house. Then, the news was heard, that the lady suffered from Gastro esophageal reflux disease (G.E.R.D.). G.E.R.D. is a medical condition where food comes
