Features a one-player mode
Three boss levels
Knock out line of berserk zombies
Play on your buddy's server

Welcome to the Zarnok Fortress, where you have a very short time to save your friends who have been kidnapped by the Menace.

You become a killer robot hero to save your friends from the evil Zarnok, but don't forget to head back to your friend's bungalow before you get to a point where there's no room for you and him to both fit inside one of the rooms.

Your friends must have been captured in one of the rooms, and your entry point is in a blocked off room with no signs of your friends.

But make sure you don't get knocked back down to the ground by the crazy zombies. They won't stop coming even when they're knocked back to the ground.

They only knock you back down in order to attack you and clear off a path for them so that they can attack you once you're knocked down.

Plus you have to do your best not to get knocked in to a super powerful blast that knocks you down at the very least. It's amazing what your buddy did to get a super powerful, yet unlucky explosion going off.

The Zarnok area is a very tricky and dangerous place to be, so don't go in there unless your buddy has his back to you, and when he yells at you to go away, that will be the time that you need to jump in to the room and save them. But be careful not to slip off the road and fall into one of the many lethal pits.

If you grab the rope to reach high off the ground, and you jump in to the holes, you'll have to deal with a hot deadly flame that'll simply melt you away. It's a super dangerous danger zone, but it also means that you can jump in to one of the holes and clip on, and pull yourself up using the rope.

Tenu is a tactics game where players will make use of items, skills and weapons to defeat the enemy in traditional shoot 'em up fashion. However, due to the unique way the levels are set up, players will have to use all the items at their disposal to navigate the level and complete the objective. There are four types of items: a bow, which can fire any weapon and cannot be attacked; a pair of legs, which enables the player to 'jump' from object to object; a pair of arms, which allows

What's new:

Robo's World is a game where each character needs a running grab-and-aim input to function. This has the potential to make it far more enjoyable than the average "wack-a-mole" style mario-like game. Unfortunately, it's entirely up to you to figure out when to use it, so you'll find yourself endlessly running back and forth from one place to another, which can be incredibly frustrating. Each area in the game has a certain function. At the beginning of the game, you visit the enemy world, which is a world that Robotnik has built for space travel. In this world, there is a lone fortress near a forest which needed to be destroyed. The music theme for the entire game plays when you first land on Robotnik's world, confirming that you were sent in to destroy his fortress. After defeating the final boss, you return to the world from which you have come to destroy the fortress. However, before you can get there, you must pass through a different world. And just after passing through the enemy's world, you land on a world which is the same location as the first trip, but has become a village. Zarnok Fortress The Zarnok Fortress is a giant fortress made of a dark metal and waves. Note that the Zarnok Fortress is on the very top of a hill. As soon as you enter this side, you land on the top of the hill, with the ominous machine gun towers we've all seen so many times before. The Zarnok Fortress seems to extend a half-a-mile away from the top of the hill. It has two bridge entrances. (one on each side of the fortress) A gigantic gate, made of the same metal as the fortress, which consists of a gigantic emblem of the Zarnok family and a destroyed machine. There is also a building near the gate which has a door that, when broken, allows you to pass through. As you explore the fortress, you can encounter various party dungeons, such as the Zarnok Army, which is a giant machine that fires blue lasers at you. There are also various team dungeons, such as the Robo Zarc, which has lots of small robots that jump at you with all-powerful bombs. There are also various boss buildings, such as Zarnok's Shock Troopers, and various more powerful weapons and even robots. Combat When you enter the Z
