'For The Warp' is a new and original Sci-Fi Fantasy Action-RPG brought to you by the talented and award-winning indie developer Widelands Studios. Embark on a dangerous adventure with your friends against a mysterious alien foe in the far future on a long-lost Earth... Widelands Studios is a small independent studio based in Manchester UK founded in late 2011 by friends and comrades with the vision of creating an innovative and high quality RPG that will never be replicated. The team is a mixed bunch of ex-developers, marketing and project management staff and freelancers from all across the UK. The game has a promising future ahead as we are hard at work on further enhancements to the current game and we look forward to the completion of our beta test later this year. Worlds Collide The Making Of... The soundtrack to "For The Warp" was composed, recorded and produced by Martin Stonehouse. Martin is a guitarist and music producer from the North West of England. His influences over the years have been an eclectic mix of everything from Jazz to classical and Punk to Rock and Metal! Having learned the basics of recording and producing music at college, Martin eventually decided that he wanted to make music for a living instead. Taking the skills he learnt at college and producing a series of 'radio-hits', he eventually got his break when Sony, after listening to one of Martin's sound-tracks made a contact with him! Sony were looking for bands to back up at the music festivals and Martin was to work their 2nd music festival in Paris, France. In the 'early' days, Martin had worked with Widelands Studios on a number of occasions, where he'd produced the sound-tracks to a number of their previous

Overview Phil Lollar's Age of Wonders: Planetfall is the latest instalment in the series of turn-based wargame strategy RPG hybrids and is the first to actually deal with the alien threat that has been plaguing mankind throughout the entire series to date. The goal of the game is the same as it always was - draw players into the global scale war of strategy that involves more than just a few units but thousands upon thousands of bases and action points on a truly epic scale - however, the mechanics that have been introduced by this grand new scale (with further change along the way) really brings the experience together.

Gameplay The turn-based, action-roleplaying elements of the grand scheme are brought to life by the new UI, which enables players to see the entire theatre of operations more clearly than has ever been seen before in a strategy game. Players now have a much clearer idea of where the action is taking place than has ever been possible in a tactical RPG and this, perhaps, more than any other element, helps to bring the grand scale war of strategy to life. War has been brought to the global level and players have a large army that is stationed all over the world. It is incumbent upon players to conquer multiple bases and unlock the heavy, sci-fi-inspired technology to make their armies unstoppable. It is the perfect setting for this grand strategy experience and Age of Wonders: Planetfall continues the rich saga that has begun in the previous games, Age of Wonders: The Tower of Ahkhan, Age of Wonders III and the upcoming Age of Wonders: Planetfall. This new setting allows you to start at the origin of the alien invasion but you can also do it in a totally new way by seeing some of the new detailed technology that has been unlocked and whether you have seen that technology before is key to your strategic actions. When new technology is introduced it also gives the AI extra tools to fight you in certain ways that you are not used to. It was not uncommon in Age of Wonders III for the AI to successfully counter the technologies in a certain way that actually made them stronger than they were in Age of Wonders III. In a setting where everything is possible, one cannot even assume that coming up with a plan of action against the AI's secret sci-fi powered technology is possible. The long-time enduring
