Election 3 is a simulation of the American political process set in the year 2020, with historical election data based on the real-world 2016 election. The game simulates the primary and general elections for every national elected office in the game: president, vice president, senate, and house. The game simulates elections for a city council, a school board, a state legislative body, a state constitutional convention, and a state senate. Fourteen state governors and three territorial governors are also included in the game. The game also includes three state legislatures (mostly large legislatures in Southern and Western states), six state constitutional conventions, two school boards, and a mayor of a major city. There are 20 playable positions in the game (every member of congress is playable except for those in the third congressional district of Hawaii, who are not playable). The game simulates elections for every district in the state, which can be controlled by either party. There are more than 100 playable metrics and customization options in the game. The game is designed to be an engaging, dynamic political simulator for the player to interact with. When playing in dictator mode, the simulation runs until the player retires, retires via the end-of-election screen, or chooses an alternate retirement date (see Details below). There is currently no multiplayer mode in the game. Most of the decisions can be made by only one player. The primary objective of the game is to develop the policies and issue the bills that you think are best for the country. You can only develop your own set of policies. You are not required to play as the conservative party or the liberal party, or any other political party. All parties have equal power and, if they all issue the same legislation, the bills will automatically become law. All legislation in the game is based on default values, so you can use the game to experiment with policies. There is no tutorial. The game is designed to be played on a desktop or on a mobile device. This is an early access game. There may be more features coming. Controls: Left mouse button: Click and hold - Do nothing. What's new:

Resume We do not know just how many of these are still around, but what remains of the once-great enclave of “starry-moon-island” is overshadowed by a government building, the much photographed but never approached Civil and Korean War Veterans Memorial. The main attraction is the Main Building and its sweeping views of the harbor and waters of the South Pacific. The church still stands, perhaps the best preserved and preserved of all. Of particular note is the main chapel’s bell tower, one of the few square bell towers to survive all of the tsunami, volcanic eruption and earthquakes in southern Hawaii. The bell is worthy of a list of its own, having rung in the demise of empires, and changed the fate of countries. In the area above the church are two churches and several other smaller buildings. Viewable is the church of St. Ann and the chapel of the Sacred Heart Church with its magnificent view from the lagoon. Take note of the remains of lighthouse you pass on the way to the island. Restored in the 1960s according to the Lighthouse Preservation Society, it is said that this especially historic lighthouse’s light has once again been restored to the same glory that once was. Back away from its landmark on the Point Lookout peninsula. The observer hopes to see its glow once again. The new home of the NPS at the time of its opening was on this little island alone. The little speck of land has since moved to higher ground. View all Photos View all List Photos 8. Hamakua Coastline View all Photos View all List Photos 9. Pai Lehua O Stendera This photo was taken in the late 1980s with the water as white as can be by looking out from Stendera Beach Park. The land is now home to the wail calling visitor center and multiple condos and resorts. No longer does the observer see white-tops of sandy beach, only a dark rock to the far left of the mausoleum. The long-time beach at Stendera was changed forever in the 1980s. Instead of the sun-bathing friendly sands, there are now fifty-foot by forty-foot tiki-filled condos. The park serves as memorial to the more than four-hundred U.S. military personnel killed in the Battle of Iwo Jima. The resting place of the USMC veterans is on the little beach, and the visitor can have access to the ocean’s edge. The USMC has never
