By the time Mara was 14, she had been on the streets since the age of 11, when she was a runaway. "I had a lot of pimples and was a little lighter skinned than I am now, so I always stood out," she said. When Mara was 14, her friend Teresa came to her with a new idea. "Teresa said, 'I've been on the street for six years, and now I'm going to college. You can do the same thing. I'll be your mentor.'" Mara said. Her goal was to get out of the streets and turn her life around, starting with a college degree. But Teresa was just getting started. "When Mara walked out of my door she was a child who had to walk the streets for survival," said Teresa. "When I graduated from college, I was not a child anymore. The goals and dreams I had for Mara were not as clear and simple as they should have been. We had to find a way for her to get what she needed to get." Teresa's mother Teresa explained that she and her husband, Peter, felt it was important for Mara to have a safe environment to grow up in. With that in mind, they opened Peter's home to Mara. "I didn't see it that way. I saw it as two more mouths to feed," Mara said. "But they were my parents. I was always welcome there." Teresa and Mara got to know each other as best friends. "She was 17 going on 19," said Teresa, "but she acted and looked younger." In all her life, Mara had never seen a prettier friend. "I was like her shadow," she said. "I didn't like to get too close to most people, for fear of hurting them," said Mara. "But I'd been through a lot." She said the opening of Peter's home helped her to see the light at the end of the tunnel. "I really saw that a house could be a house with love, even though I'd never had one before," she said. "My parents loved me,
