Terjemahan Kitab Al Afaq Pdf 69. 9 stars from 64 reviews.. fan in audio in burmah apk downloadSir, I have read the article entitled, "Panoramic radiography-an alternative to conventional radiography in intraoral periapical investigation" by Sindhu et al.\[\[@ref1]\] The authors have explored the applications of CBCT for the diagnosis and management of various dental and oral pathologies. They have also emphasized on the risk of exposure to ionizing radiation when using conventional radiography. However, I would like to add some comments. Panoramic radiography is the most commonly used intraoral imaging modality in clinical practice. The authors have claimed that, in comparison to conventional radiographs, CBCT uses less radiation and has the potential to improve the diagnostic performance of clinicians. The exposure for a panoramic radiograph is 1.8 rads (37 mGy in milligrams of radiation absorbed by the patient) whereas the exposure to a conventional radiograph is 7.2-31.4 rads (180--744 mGy in radiation absorbed by the patient).\[\[@ref2]\] The authors have mentioned that, the whole skull (or mandible) has to be scanned in panoramic radiography, whereas in conventional radiography, only the head region is needed. As a result, radiation exposure in conventional radiography is comparatively higher. The chance of image overlap is also higher in case of panoramic radiography, and the anatomy and pathological features are generally more difficult to identify. Panoramic radiography is particularly useful for screening and detection of small lesions in the oral region.\[\[@ref1]\] Considering the biological and clinical parameters, the contribution of ionizing radiation to cancer incidence is not clear. However, reports for the risk of cancer development during childhood and adolescence are not sufficient to determine the exact incidence of cancer development and outcome of the complications.\[\[@ref3][\@ref4]\] Several reports have evaluated the radiation dose associated with panoramic radiography and they found that it is less than the risk of developing thyroid cancer from radiation exposure of conventional radiography. Reports for the doses associated with the usage of CBCT are unavailable. I recommend more research on the contribution of radiation to the increase of the cancer risk and the
