Wedding photography is a very costly. I would love to know if there is a template available somewhere that will. to have on hand a nice selection of every colored camera body and. Is there an easy way to select that range of colors and then use the. He and his fiance had a basic wedding ceremony with the. November 13, 2009 You know my love for gumbo and all things Creole. Creole gumbo has a special place in my heart. Last week, we got to try one of the recipes from the brand new New Orleans Cooking: Cookbook by Treena and Susan Miller. The book is a great way to explore flavors of New Orleans and New Creole cooking. It also features tons of recipes that are adapted and created by the students of the New Orleans Cooking School. We tried this recipe for Seafood Gumbo that was developed by students of the NOCS. Susan Miller and Treena Miller built this gumbo with their own family recipes. It is to die for! I am in love with the spicy Creole seasonings in the gumbo.

Let's get straight to it, we start with the Gumbo base. In a medium stockpot, heat the oil over medium-high heat. Add the onion and cook for 3-5 minutes, until the onions are transparent and beginning to turn golden. Next, saute the celery, bell pepper and garlic in the oil for about 5 more minutes, until the celery is tender. Now we add the bay leaves, thyme and mushrooms to the pot and saute for 2-3 minutes. Add the tomatoes, shrimp and the can of tomatoes in juice, reduce the heat to medium, and simmer for 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Next, we want to strain the stock of any tomato pulp that may have been released during cooking. In a large colander set over the stockpot, line up 3 layers of paper towels. Gently press the tomatoes and solids against the paper towels, forcing as much of the liquid through as possible. After several minutes, discard the pulp. Next, place the stockpot over medium-high heat. Add the roux and whisk constantly, as you would a roux for a gravy, for about 15-30 minutes, making sure you scrape the bottom of the pot frequently to prevent burning. A roux is a mixture of butter and flour cooked slowly and stirred often in
