Blending Modes and Opacity A layer is a tool used to combine two layers or effects to create a new, composite layer. The newly created layer is called the blend. This new layer may contain a mixture of the layers as well as their own unique attributes. When editing an image with multiple layers, the simplest way to combine them is to simply merge the layers together in Photoshop. However, there are several more advanced blending modes and opacity settings that can create more results than simply merging layers. These abilities allow you to create basic image composition techniques that result in new and unique images.

Layer Opacity Layer opacity refers to the transparency of the two layers composing a layer. The setting of opacity for a layer affects the transparency of the combined layer in relation to the other layers. For example, a layer containing red text is normally 50 percent transparent. If that same text were to be placed on a layer of blue text, the resulting opacity would be 100 percent, making the blue text completely transparent. When multiple layers are placed on top of one another, the topmost layer in the chain has a default opacity of 100 percent. All layers in between that layer and the bottommost layer have a default opacity of 0 percent. When a layer is placed within multiple layers, the opacity of that layer can be changed. Figure 13-1 shows the default settings for a group of layers.

Layers Affected With a single layer, only the opacity setting of that layer is affected by the setting of the layer of the other layers. If you set the opacity to 100 percent, the layer cannot affect the opacity of the other layers below it in the chain. If you change the opacity of a layer in the mix to less than 100 percent, the opacity of the layer that is being affected by the new opacity is also adjusted.

Bump Mapping and Using Alpha Maps A bump map is an image that shows variations in brightness — like freckles or roughness — on a layer. Creating a bump map requires some initial work. You must use Photoshop and the Brush tool to paint the area of the image that will be used to create the bump. Then you must create the actual bump map and save it as a layer. The bump map can then be used with any other layer in the image, giving it the appearance of a bump. The bump map can also be used with

With input from the conference and discussions about the role of the state in tackling the substance abuse crisis, the Crisis Management Committee and the Western Australian Alliance on Drugs and Alcohol have worked hard to prepare a set of recommendations for substance abuse policy. The recommendations are now available on the University of Western Australia's Western Australian Alliance on Drugs and Alcohol website. 'Can the state do a better job?' an interview with Craig Main In an interview recorded at the 2011 Biennial Conference, Dr Craig Main, Director of the Centre for Drug Research and Evaluation at the University of WA, and Chair of the Crisis Management Committee, looks back on the state of the policy debate in the field of substance abuse, and assesses whether it is able to provide a better service to the state's communities and citizens.
