evidence. The objective of this study is to systematically review the evidence on whether the consumption of fish is associated with a lower prevalence of type 2 diabetes. We searched PubMed and PsycINFO for epidemiological studies that investigated the association between fish consumption and type 2 diabetes. No language restrictions were applied and a literature search was conducted from 1980 through June 2010. Reference lists of reviews and included articles were scanned for further studies. Thirty-four studies met the inclusion criteria. The pooled odds ratios (ORs) and 95 % confidence intervals (CIs) for the effect of fish consumption on type 2 diabetes were 0.87 (0.83, 0.91) and 0.82 (0.73, 0.91) for men and women, respectively. Subgroup analyses showed that larger studies had significantly larger pooled ORs than smaller studies. Large differences were observed for studies based on case-control and cross-sectional designs (0.65 (0.46, 0.92) vs. 0.97 (0.91, 1.03); OR 1.10 (0.87, 1.38) vs. 0.65 (0.48, 0.88), respectively). Compared with the results based on a single study, results from 1 study had a minor influence on the pooled ORs. The results suggest that there is no clear association between fish consumption and type 2 diabetes. There is a stronger association in men than in women. Compared with smaller studies, larger studies tended to provide larger pooled ORs. 8.1 Today I was putting together this year's top 5 movies of the year list that I did for my class. I opened up the list and the title "Won't Back Down" came up. I immediately thought

"HmMMM I can't believe I didn't think of that before." and I tried my best to do some research and find out more about the movie. Won't Back Down is a 2011 American social drama film directed by Roger Michell and written by Maria Maggenti. It tells the story of a mother (Nicole Kidman) who engages in a fight for her children, and the husband (John Cusack) who doesn't step up to help her out. I really enjoyed this movie, it isn't the typical movie we usually watch. It doesn't have a happy ending or much of a happy theme or mood. It's not about love and finding it. It's about finding it for yourself. To give my the reason for my post: I've been thinking about this movie a lot lately and I've come to realize that there are a lot of people that are just like me. I've seen the movie and now that I have some more thought about it, I want to share some of the things that I have learned from this movie. 1. Love is something that we all long for. We all want to feel loved. We all want to experience love. And most of us are like Cusack; we think that we're never going to find love. 2. Nobody wants to be a mother. We all want our children to have a better life than we had. And it's not always easy for us. It's not always what we expected. It's not what we think. Sometimes you have to be brave and make sacrifices. Sometimes you have to make choices that you don't want to make. But you have to know in the end that you made the best choice for your child. 3. No matter how awful someone seems, there are still good things about them. Everybody has good things in them. We just have to be brave enough to look for them. 4. If you want something, sometimes you have to
