Elena Vazquez-Jurado.Shkreli is a convicted felon who was arrested earlier this year on securities fraud charges in New York. Following his arrest, Shkreli was incarcerated, and his bail was revoked. Shkreli was convicted in 2015 and ordered to serve five years in prison for masterminding a Ponzi scheme, though he was released last month. Shkreli has been widely criticised for the high prices of drugs he's acquired — especially Daraprim, a drug used to treat cancer patients and pregnant women, and which normally sells for about $15 a pill. Shkreli raised the price of Daraprim from $13.50 to $750 overnight last week, and subsequently criticised the government for making the situation worse. Other former employees allege that Shkreli sometimes uses his business to enrich his friends. He also regularly speaks about his efforts to undermine the FDA. Shkreli has been a controversial figure for years, having been known to pay off employees to give him favourable reviews on Google, and suing the company in 2013. He was also the topic of an episode of the popular podcast "Broke" last year, where he was described as an anti-hero.
