I tried to make a game with a retro feel that also has a modern feel about it. You can play the game with a controller or with the mouse, I'd recommend the touchpad for the controller. The game will be on steam at release. 1. Single player (current work in progress) 2. Internet co-op 3. Playstation Network co-op 4. Same controller for both 5. Pen and Touch on tablet (iPad or Android device) 6. Online leaderboard 7. Offline leaderboard I don't have any firm idea about how this will be priced right now, its a work in progress. Any feedback and comments are welcome. A: Problem I think your idea sounds great. But you need to be clearer about what you want. All of the points you listed are what you should be considering, but you're not actually taking any of them into account. A few examples. Unlockable ships can be fixed in the future, but it is problematic to introduce this already. If you have a game that takes weeks to beat, you don't want to add in unlockables. This one's pretty self-explanatory. If you have a developer behind the game, have them see if they can implement multi-player on their own and if they can't do it, then you have the wrong idea. If you actually do it yourself, I can't say I can offer any advice, but consider the following things. How many players will you need? Do you want single player and multiplayer to be different or are they just going to be the same thing? Do you actually want to "beat" the game? What sort of difficulty does single-player mode need to be? The difficulty issue is going to be pretty overwhelming. There's no better way to test a game then to play it yourself and see if you can actually finish the game. If you can't beat the game then the issue is fairly clear to identify and not much else can be done about it. Even once you know how difficult the game is going to be, this becomes a vicious cycle of trying to make the game more difficult to put your audience off. Example A game I played recently is a local multiplayer based game where you play as a superhero and you need to rescue one of your fellow superheroes from another world. I started playing it solo on a mobile device,

*Note: Empyrean is running under the Unity game engine. Every game has a developer package attached to it, however, long term support for the Empyrean package is currently not planned in this package of games. If you install this package and update periodically (every 30 days or so) it is at your own risk and you are using this package at your own risk that you are kept up to date on the latest changes that come to it. No changes have gone into the Empyrean package between 0.0612 and 0.1010. Up-to-date source code can be found at the links below.

Amazon S3 Game Environment ($3.50 a month)

- Release builds, created from the master development branch.
- Some testing packages included for GC but not signed.

Life will not always be kind to you, so learn to work, and fight for the things you need.Managed services provider GTSI Announces New Client Growth in Ontario GTSI, the managed services provider, announced today that it has signed a deal with CGI Federal to provide Managed Network Services (MNS) for CGI Federal's federal employees and contractors in Ontario. The Managed Network Services program is a secure, managed internet solution with reduced administration and operational costs that simplifies a federal agency's managed services contracts. It integrates into existing applications through customizable APIs and allows users to have full control over their data. With their new contract, CGI Federal will be able to tap into GTSI's Global Intelligence Group, which is home to a team of subject-matter experts who analyze internet activity on a global scale. The team's experience will allow the federal organization to streamline its network operations and ensure security is maintained. CGI Federal currently provides MNS services to over 100 organizations across the United States, including 25 federal organizations. GTSI's cloud-based Managed Network Services can also be extended to a federal agency's in-house users. "CGI Federal is looking for technology and operations providers who understand and support our commitment to improving government efficiency," says Ryan Schreyer, vice president of CGI Federal's federal organization. "GTSI has a strong track record, and we are thrilled to be working with them to improve our operations." Scott Salter, CEO and president of GTSI, said, "GTSI is excited to be partnered with CGI Federal, one of the world's largest federal technology companies. We have the expertise and technology required to provide CGI Federal with a solution that has been proven to be effective, which ultimately will improve the security and efficiency of their operations." "GTSI was our first choice for providing Managed Services for our national organizations," said Craig Allen, director, CGI Federal's federal organization. "We are excited to partner with a proven managed services provider that has a strong understanding of federal systems and an expansive cloud-based managed services platform." With the newly-announced deal, GTSI is extending the MNS program to 19 additional federal organizations in Canada and around the world. About GTS
