decrying the idiom of C++: `_Have you ever tried to use a C++ compiler with a C++ library? They want different things._` For example, back in the day, I used to write C++ programs with C code. My old favorite was writing a library of C functions and wrapping them with C++ classes, and using that as a framework for my real C++ program. True, I've been trying to present code as concisely as possible, but there does seem to be a lot of imperative style thrown in there for readability. ~~~ avdempsey

I'm a bit at a loss how to respond. I think that's a great trade off for most people, but for
