Field of the Invention The present invention relates to the field of manufacturing semiconductor devices and more specifically to a method of cleaning a deposition chamber after a deposition step. 2. Discussion of Related Art Semiconductor processing involves the deposition of numerous materials such as oxides, nitrides, polysilicon, etc. During the deposition of any of these materials, a number of contaminants are formed. For example, chlorine and fluorine are produced during deposition of any of the above materials which result in the formation of native defects within the grown materials which are detrimental to device operation. One particular defect is the formation of a native oxide on the silicon wafer which is known in the art as SiO₂. The formation of native oxide is related to the process chemistry used to
