What is the image map? Image maps offer a way to specify which part of the HTML document is linked to the image. Here is how to use it in a web page: Add an `img` tag with the `src` set to your image. Add a line in the HTML code that starts with a hash. This is typically a `#` character. Add a line that describes the name of the image. Add a line in the HTML code with an `img` tag that links to the hash you added in the previous step. What is the `.htaccess` file? `.htaccess` is used to control the access to a directory and its subdirectories. You can define whether the directory is accessible or not, what file must be requested when accessing this directory, and what kind of access is required. The folder you are now downloading may have a .htaccess file or not. This file is typically placed in the folder with the data files you are downloading. You can find out whether there is a file of this name in the folder, and, if it exists, open it and read it. Most of the time, you will see the following file content:

AddType application/x-httpd-php.php Note: The order is important! The .php file must be the first one listed. This file acts as a server that tells the web browser what to do when visiting the website. If you are not using Apache, you will need to install a similar server (for example, the free lighttpd server). What is the X-Sendfile extension? This is a technology used in Linux and Apache to handle both static files and PHP scripts
