ASUS Z87 desktop computer (direct link)

In late 2009 I picked up an ASUS Z87, a motherboard with an Intel i7 processor. The motherboard itself is not a gaming device, and likely won't be either by the time I get around to reviewing this, but lets keep that in mind.

I wanted to show this review to my parents for Christmas and several of their friends were available to help provide some in-depth, real world gaming experiences. During this demonstration period I had several questions for them, and after having these questions answered were well-versed in all the nuances of the system. Knowing so much ahead of time meant far better positioning for the valuable monetary contribution!

What's new in Miss Neko:

theory: Didist! ?????????????? It's been a while since I last wrote about this rant of mine... So once upon a time about half a year ago (January 2007), I took a day trip to a few of the non-partitioned states of S.E. Asia. I was planning it for quite a while...here's some "high school" notes (topics not covered in the previous posts :) --The topography of the region was "flat" and only bears exotic-looking trees (sort of a Muzak of the Jungle), except the tall trees that had spread their pretty hard leaves. Along the roadsides, tall grass grows, rolling hills and the pretty villages of Northern India lived off the money earned from honey, rice and tea~ --Indian roads always "seemed", so..... 1) Rattling your windows and hopes/dreams of getting some water thrown on you at dusk. 2) The deafening loud-engine pops your ears off as if you were being spat on by the Gods off the top of some big pussy willow. 3) Stop regularly at the tea houses to rest the tired mind, knees and legs. 4) Decent, often miserably bad food made with the tastiest and most exotic ingredients and served with Indian-kind-like hospitality. :) --Evading, chattering butterflies in the aforementioned meadows, watching a few cows fly a kite and a few feisty, and biting dogs. (Makes for nice pictures with an electric TV huh? Well, if you have access to a good phone, you can have a decent one) --Some better than others indigenous restaurants (which tasted better at night) serving indescribable chicken curries in giant serving spoons and chilies that made you die. --The Peace sign you will pass on the way back home. (a.k.a over-exaggerated plastic-looking plastic peace sign - they make them in different sizes & shapes). --A type of "May your God be blessed" chant you will hear over and over on all occasions. Sounds like a magic spell though they probably don't know that this is their God. Their god? They don't even call him/her by name, their "Friends," "supreme priest" or simply a "my name." --Anyway, the image that stuck with me from the trip was Validation of the Scleral Buckling to Reduce Elevation in Large Ascites: Comparison With Transjugular Intrahepatic Portosystemic Shunt. To evaluate the efficacy of scleroplasty in the lysis of symptoms in patients with large ascites and to compare the results of the procedure with those of the transjugular intrahepatic portosystemic shunt (TIPS). We evaluated 20 patients (13 women and 7 men) who underwent either scleroplasty (n=17) or TIPS (n=3). The mean age was 45±8 years (range, 35-59 years). The main indications for scleroplasty were refractory ascites (n=16), respiratory (n=3), and gastrointestinal (n=1) symptoms. For comparison, the patients were also evaluated for symptoms related to liver disease. The time since surgery was 7±4 (range, 3-17) months. The procedure was successful in 15 (88%) patients with ascites and symptomatic decreased symptoms. There were 5 (33%) serious
