(Ratings and opinions submitted by members of our site.)Q: C# - String array in method returns error? I'm making a simple string array in C# which is set in the main and passed to a method to display a list of files. static string[]

ShowFiles(string folder) { List Temp = new List(); string[] files = null; files =
System.IO.Directory.GetFiles(folder, " .", System.IO.SearchOption.AllDirectories);
Temp.AddRange(files); return

Temp.ToArray(); } When I run this code it highlights the files variable and says "Use of unassigned local variable 'files'". What's wrong with my code? A: You are declaring a variable called files, and then using it.
That is causing the error. Just remove the declaration of that variable and it should work fine: static string[] ShowFiles(string folder) { List Temp = new List(); string[]

files; files =
System.IO.Directory.GetFiles(folder, ".", System.IO.SearchOption.AllDirectories);
Temp.AddRange(files); return
Temp.ToArray(); } The biochemical characterization of two monomeric and monodisperse Au(19) clusters. The geometrical, electronic, and optical properties of two novel Au(19) clusters, namely, Au(19)(tBuN)(18)N(3) and Au(19)((t)BuN)(6)(OTf)(12), are investigated. Both clusters have been prepared by the reduction of Au(I)(MeCN)(2) in the presence of various
