Welcome to Morstairs, a land of open wilderness and harsh winters ruled by a brutal, Mad Queen who longs for a male heir. Her actions and aggressive zeal left her kingdom on the brink of civil war. Her husband fled from her, while she kept her son, a young prince, prisoner in the dungeons. Brothers and other men loyal to the Queen lost their lives in the war. The war left her court in ruin and her people devastated. Upon her death, a civil war broke out in the streets, a war to end the reign of Queen Edgerton. Brothers and men who still support the Queen razed her palace, gutted the town and besieged her hideout. Meanwhile her son, a young prince of noble blood took control of the Queen's guards and fled to the woods. The Queen's remaining loyal men killed her guards and took her son prisoner. The Queen is now dead. But her son has escaped to the forest. His goal: to take revenge and to regain his rightful place on the throne. But the powerful men who ruled the Queen support a new, young man to become the ruler of Morstairs. For the players it will be a real time RPG adventure game with simple controls and easy to use interface. About Morstairs - Part II : Tribes of Morstairs Tribes are clans who live scattered across the country, for defense, to protect their land, or to hunt game. They are allies of the King and vassals to the nobles. Tribes exist to defend their land and to hunt for the food they need. Tribes are scattered across the country. Even though they live in close proximity, their villages, towns, and castles are completely isolated from each other. Each Tribe has a flag representing their allegiance to the King of Morstairs. A DM can choose as many Tribes as he likes. Each one will have its own details, and can be fully custom built and given names to suit your gaming needs. Character Creation Character creation starts with choosing your Tribe. You'll choose a Nation. You then choose 3 tribes that serve your Nation. Tribes are chosen, as you can specify 3 that serve your Nation. There are 4 types of Tribes. The Drunken Club : Noun=an association of people who like to get drunk. The Dark Corners : Noun=An association of misfits, people with dual personality, and

Team USA is the favorite in the women's two-man bobsled competition in Pyeongchang and will be led by four-time Olympian Jamie Greubel. Greubel, Sara Renfrew and Stephanie Jung will compete for the second time at the Winter Olympics. She was dominant as a rookie in 2014 when she won gold in four-man and silver in two-man. USA's two-man sled is a closely matched race. Greubel and Jung, nicknamed "The Flying Squirrels" because of their high-flying moves on the ice, are considered the front runners. Greubel won Olympic gold and world titles in the two-man event, and her younger sister Kyler has competed in two World Championships. "Win or lose, it's a fun event," Greubel said. "We feel like there's a lot of highs and lows, it's all a matter of execution." The competition starts Friday with two two-man runs before the crew takes to the course in a four-man sled. The two best men's and women's four-man sleds will compete Saturday while the two-man final is held Sunday. While Greubel and Renfrew have been at the top in women's bobsled, Jung and South Korea's Yang Hak-seon are a strong duo in the men's field, having finished no lower than third at last year's World Championships. South Korea has a streak of six consecutive men's sled finishes in the top three. The Chinese men won in 2018, but Hak-seon and Yang struggled because of a long wheelbase and a top gate that held them back. "We could barely move," South Korean coach Song Yun-ho said. "Yang and I feel confident that we can be a contender to win it." South Korea, seeking to claim the first gold of any country, has the third-largest delegation behind Germany and the USA in Explore elements and mechanics of the game. Get a feel for the story. The biggest thing to come out of this visual novel is the branching narrative. This means that in this game, things that you say and do will have ramifications on your choices. For example, there is a point where you meet a man who makes 47 an offer he can't refuse. As 47 is walking away from this man, he realizes there's no way back. This means that his decisions in this moment will affect his choices and story in the next chapter. 47 experiences many of the twists and turns that can be expected from a visual novel, but the interactions between characters mean that it's different than anything else in the genre. 47 is a great first time to experience the visual novel, but it has such a great story that it would be an excellent way to get more into the genre. Recoil is a PvP FPS game that allows you to use your weapon recoil by taking into account a weapon-specific recoil value for each enemy, as well as amount of ammo in the clip. Then the recoil value can either launch you towards the direction you have shot, or towards the opposite direction. If you shoot near an enemy and you recoil in the opposite direction, you will be launched away from the enemy and towards an enemy of the opposite color. This is what makes recoil so powerful and easy to use against multiple opponents at once. In a way, this is in the same vein as GoldenEye, but there are significant differences. Using the recoil of your weapon does the following: 1) Dodges enemy projectiles 2) Lifts you away from the enemy projectile 3) You can use the recoil mechanics while moving forward 4) You have the option of using weapon type recoil instead of gun recoil. 5) You can throw around the environment, such as grenade throws, and land them somewhere else. Objective: I will be showing the recoil method with a player who has a single pistol. Forward - You will be moving forward with the auto-fire enabled. You will fire the pistol when the enemy comes into the range of the pistol. You will then recoil in the opposite direction. You have to aim to get the enemy to fire. Once the enemy fires, their aim will be set on the targeted enemy. Backward - You will be moving backwards with auto-fire enabled. You will fire the pistol when the enemy comes into the range of the pistol. You will recoil in the opposite direction. You have to aim to get the enemy to fire. Once the enemy fires, their aim will be set on the targeted enemy. Reverse - You will be moving in the opposite direction to the targeted enemy. You will fire the pistol when the enemy comes into the range of the pistol. You will recoil in the opposite direction. You have to aim to get the enemy to fire. Once the enemy fires, their aim will be set on the targeted enemy. Zoom In - You will be moving into the targeted enemy. You will fire the pistol when the enemy comes into the range of the pistol. You will recoil in the opposite direction. You have to aim to get the enemy to fire. Once the enemy fires, their aim will be set on the targeted enemy. Zoom Out
