It calls on consumers to complete the "Healthy Heart Pledge" which is also available as a smartphone app and online. Signing up also means that people will be notified by the BHF about additional NHS services that are available. The British Heart Foundation hopes that by highlighting the number of heart attacks which are preventable, or life-saving for those suffering from a heart attack, more people will become aware of their health and the importance of taking care of it. Statistics for 2014 show that one in every six people in the UK is currently diagnosed with diabetes and that 1.6 million adults have been living with the condition for ten years or longer. More than two-thirds of the UK's adult population have one or more other chronic health conditions such as asthma, arthritis and depression. The initiative will also include the "Heart Health Check" - a small, affordable screening test which is available for free via the NHS. The test, which takes less than three minutes, is used to detect signs of high blood pressure, cholesterol, a heart murmur and signs of diabetes. "A heart attack can kill. It's easy to forget that." - Dr. Liz Clarke, BHF President The campaign was launched ahead of World Heart Day on 19th February, which draws attention to the importance of heart health in everyday life. It aims to ensure that consumers become more aware of their bodies, and the importance of maintaining good heart health. For more information on World Heart Day and to find out what you can do to protect your heart and help others, visit the British Heart Foundation website at www.bhf.org.uk The British Heart Foundation (BHF) aims to help prevent heart disease and stroke by funding research, improving the public's knowledge, and promoting healthy living and lifestyle. The BHF is a registered charity No. 256067. Heart disease is the biggest cause of death in the UK, killing more people than all
