The first of these, however, did not contain a statement of reasons, the second has no persuasive force, the third is not on point because it only considered notice to counsel who had not appeared, and the fourth is inapposite, as it did not actually hold that notice under § 1915 was required but rather that, although such notice is not required, the plaintiff must apprise the court of the reasons he is filing the complaint. One of our sister Circuits has considered the right of indigent prisoners to proceed in forma pauperis and concluded that notice was required. See In re Davenport, 147 F.3d 605, 608 (7th Cir. 1998). We, however, have not yet confronted the issue, and, therefore, we will not address it until necessary.
