A novice designer who wants to use the Photoshop program can download it free of charge from the Adobe website (www.adobe.com), if you have an active internet connection, or you can download a disc from your local library and use it at your own leisure. In fact, the powerful and popular free program called Paint Shop Pro that I review in Chapter 13 can be used to create a wide variety of designs that you can use in your print and on the web. Creating an image when you want to create an image, all you have to do is select File⇒New. The Create a New Document dialog box appears, shown in Figure 12-1. You can use this dialog box to change the dimensions of the new document. You can zoom in and out on the canvas with the Zoom tool as you create, and you can click the Zoom In button to increase the magnification of the image. The default dimensions are 8 x 11. See the next section for instructions on using different options. Figure 12.1 Create a new document in Photoshop Elements using the Create a New Document dialog box. Using different options You can use the following different options to create a new document: File Name: When you have finished creating an image, you can save it by specifying a name for the file using the File Name text box. Image Size: You can create images with a resolution of 72 dots per inch or 300 dots per inch. In the Graphic area, click Image Size to choose from the available options, as shown in Figure 12.2. The default size is 72 dots per inch. This number is the pixel resolution (the number of dots in a line by the number of lines in a page), and is represented by a number followed by a dot or a percent sign, such as 300 pixels/inch, which means 300 dots per inch. If you want to create a smaller or larger image, simply adjust the corresponding number. Photoshop enables you to customize the image resolution and creates templates of different sizes. For example, you can opt to create an A4 size image and a 5 x 7 image, as shown in Figure 12-3. Image Type: You can change the type of file that you're creating. You have the choice of PNG, GIF, JPEG, BMP, and TIF (Tagged Image File Format). The default type is JPEG. The format determines what type of images you can create from

From there you can access your documents. If you were to select a particular document (e.g. "Markets Exposures") the window would jump to that page. This is where you can customize your document. The left-hand side provides options for selecting or changing (by dragging) your colour theme. If you don't know your way around the menus, or if you're feeling particularly brave, there are plenty of keyboard shortcuts you can use for faster navigation around the options. The glutamate decarboxylase isoforms GABA(A) alpha(2), GABA(B), and GABA(A) gamma(2) differ in subcellular distribution and require Ca(2+) for their inhibition by gabazine (SR95531) in rat hippocampal neurons. The physiological role of gamma-aminobutyric acid (GABA), the major inhibitory neurotransmitter in the mammalian brain, is thought to be mediated by GABAA receptors. However, a recent study showed that the inhibitory actions of GABAA receptor agonists were blocked by the GABAA receptor blocker gabazine (SR95531). Interestingly, this GABAA receptor blocker (SR95531) also inactivated three types of glutamate decarboxylase (GAD) isoforms: GAD65, GAD67, and GAD67alpha. This study was designed to determine the cellular distributions of these GAD isoforms in rat hippocampal neurons. Immunocytochemical staining results of serial sections showed that GAD67 and GAD67alpha were present throughout the hippocampus, whereas GAD65 was localized in the dentate gyrus. Double immunocytochemical staining results of serial sections showed that GAD67alpha and GAD67 were present in both axon terminals and somata of the same cells. The degree of colocalization between GAD67alpha and GAD67 in these neurons was highest in the mossy fibers followed by stratum lucidum. Sequential immunocytochemical staining results of serial sections showed that GAD67alpha and GAD67 were present in the same cells and that the intensity of fluorescence varied from cell to cell and from section to section. Ca(2+)-chelating agents and Ca(2+)-channel blockers prevented SR95531-induced inhibition of these GAD isoforms. These results indicate that GAD67alpha and GAD67 are present in both axon terminals and somata of the same neurons and that Ca(2+) may be involved in the regulation of these GAD isoforms.Q: Is there an easy way to reduce the number of ranges that need to be expanded?
