Make it to the top by eliminating your competition, make yourself the most outrageous, provocative, dubious or just the most efficient Klomanager in the world! Game "Klomanager - The Kleopatra" Gameplay: Help a kingdom rise up to greatness by managing it's toilet system. Become "the queen of all the toilets". Become the Kleopatra. Klomanager is an absurd economic game where you run your own business. There are many different toilet types (therapists, dining rooms, toilets, saunas and toilet belts). Once you are running well, you can assign a puker, destroyer or gossiper to do the dirty work. Once he does his job, the janitor receives money for the puker, therapist gets a bonus for the therapist and so on. This money is then donated to your business. All the toilet characters have different personalities. You can assign a puker who has a strong personality to put fear in the hearts of opponents, or a gossiper who spreads malicious rumours. Once a puker has done his job, the janitor gets bonus money which can be saved or used for an advertising campaign. The more advertising campaigns you use, the better chances you have to rise to the top! Each world (map) has seven different goals. Be it to crush your competition, be stylish, or be the best or the worst Kleopatra. In the end, the Kleopatra will win. But only the Kleopatra. The overall UI is pretty simple. One big bar has the current state (per wave) of the Kleopatra, the toilet world, the puker, the destroyer and the janitor. Down at the bottom, the Kleopatra receives money for her reputation and can hire help. For playing just alone, you get 12 different goals, with more on the way. You get one goal per day and can choose the order of the goals. You also get one goal every time you win a wave. The game is a bit buggy, at times I could not click on something, or the mouse stuck and there was a crash. There are problems with the AI I guess. Sometimes the janitor is a bit unloyal to you. He will later start opening his toilet with workers, so when you assign him a puker, you have to wait until they finish their job. The average rating for this game is 5.8 by about 200 people on

; @ag:2001] has been proposed to study the phase diffusion for intense optical pulses in GaN. Considering that GaN and InN are good hosts for In$_{x}$Ga$_{1-x}$N alloys with x close to unity [@bc77], our results are also suitable for these other materials. The results obtained through the full model can be useful not only for the nc-GaN layers, but even for a priori unknown hosts such as AlN, due to the possibility of tailoring the optical properties (i.e. the density of states, energy levels, and electron-hole effective masses) of such materials through the achievable In content. High In content in In$_{x}$Ga$_{1-x}$N ($x=0.9$, or 60% In) has already been successfully achieved by pulsed laser deposition and ion implantation [@ImGaN]. ![\[fig4\]](color online). Frequency-domain analysis of the transmission coefficient of a n-type (a) p-type and (c) n-i-p-type germanium-on-silicon structure involving multiple generations of carriers. The effect of the number of GaN layers decreases from (a) to (c). (b) and (d): Transmission coefficient for GaN and Si reference samples without GaN, respectively.](FIG4.eps) We proceed to study the effect of the nc-layer on dispersion and the Fano resonant process. We model the germanium-on-silicon structure shown in Fig. \[fig2\] as two distinct regions (Ge$_{top}$ - In$_{x}$Ga$_{1-x}$N layers - Si$_{bottom}$ - Si$_{top}$) and assume n-type and p-type Fermi energy levels in the Si layers. We use the simple Drude model within the Drude-Lorentz dispersion framework (i.e. as a coupled plasma model, i.e. Eqs.

(\[eq.2.3\])-(\[eq.2.7\]) are not used). In Fig. \[fig4\], we plot the transmission coefficient in the frequency domain for a n-i-p-type
