A: I found a similar question on StackOverflow: Converting Word.docx files to InDesign and Illustrator CS5/6 files I think that the problem is with the unbreakable space in your Word document. Try formatting the text which contains the broken spaces to without break spaces, and then export the "broken" document to other programs.

Q: Objective-C2Strings from CoreData: Empty NSString for 'persistent data' I am currently struggling with an Objective-C project that is using CoreData. One of my Entities in the CoreData model has a collection property named 'sites'. I have edited the data model to add 'sites' to the entities to reflect a one-to-many relationship between the two entities. This is all working fine and the sites are correctly populated and displayed on the screen. The issue I have come across is that for some reason when I use the following code to save the data to the database:

```
NSMutableDictionary *params = [[NSMutableDictionary alloc] init]; [params setObject:[NSString stringWithFormat:@"%@,%@", self.lastName, self.firstName] forKey:@"firstName"]; [params setObject:[NSString stringWithFormat:@"%@,%@", self.lastName, self.firstName] forKey:@"lastName"]; [params setObject:self.firstName forKey:@"siteName"]; [params setObject:self.lastName forKey:@"siteName"]; [context save:&error];

Two properties are being inserted to the database table for the sites collection in the core data model: 'siteName' and 'siteName'. A third value is also inserted but is of type text. This third value is the string 'Last' as I have added this to test with: [params setObject:@"Last" forKey:@"siteName"]; The 3rd value of type 'text' is empty and I have no idea why - this is the value I want to insert into the site. My hunch is that this might have something to do with the way I have populated the collection property. Is anyone able to tell me how I can populate this value (which is basically self.lastName) in my Trabajos.Pages Friday, May 17, 2017 Canon EOS M with AF-S first-person shooter mode By now, you would have noticed the new version of Canon EOS M with AF-S. It's a new lens that can be mounted on the camera's rear part (which is actually where the lens is) and it is a pretty interesting option to have. What does it mean? Well, let's say you decide to walk around, shooting with the camera horizontally (towards the ground) and then you start moving forward. Now, you will be able to keep your distance with the subject you're shooting (like a first-person shooter game) but, still, you will be able to capture images from your perspective. Canon EOS M with AF-S first-person shooter mode This is the way it will look like if you will photograph a building, for example. You will be able to see your subject from the bottom upwards and so you will have more chances of capturing nice photographs (just by moving the camera differently than with a normal lens mounted on your camera). The time it takes to capture an image, consequently, will be a bit longer (because the camera has to reach the scene you're shooting to capture your first image) but, in the end, this option will actually give you more chances to capture a picture that is interesting for you.
