The craniofacial morphology is a major topic in general pathology. The morphology of the head is probably one of the most complex structures, with a wide spectrum of pathology and a very strong correlation with pathological mechanism. The anomalies of the craniofacial structure are often varied and complex. Often, the anatomy is not homogenous, but there are multiple folds, there are often 2 or more cavities, the bone is often asymmetrical, bony changes often present in children, and there is often a sexual dimorphism. Pathological condition may be presented by malformation, hypertrophy, hyperplasia and sometimes hypoplasia. Therefore, there are not only malformations that result from failure of normal processes, but also malformations that result from reversed or excessive growth. Pathology may result from benign, malignant, hyperplasia, or it may arise in a reactive, inflammatory, or degenerative process. Various authors have pointed out the involvement of neurological and endocrine factors in the etiology of skull deformities. The correlation between skull pathology and craniofacial malformations is an important aspect of general pathology. Magnetic resonance imaging, computed tomography, skeletal scintigraphy, and various other methods (such as radiographic, anthropometric, laser) are available to our diagnostic tools. The presentation of the radiology images and their relation to the anatomical structures must always be carefully considered. Photo by David Francis Every e79caf774b

Dallas Police Dep't, 811 F.2d 260, 263 (5th Cir. 1986). Accordingly, Garner's motion for leave to proceed IFP on appeal is granted, and the judgment of the district court is affirmed. Garner has not raised a nonfrivolous issue in his motion for recusal. We decline to consider the requested recusal, as Garner failed to timely move for recusal under 28 U.S.C. § 144. See Jennings v. Natrona County Det. Ctr. Med. Facility, 175 F.3d 775, 780 (10th Cir. 1999); United States v. Green, 879 F.2d 1257, 1259 (5th Cir. 1989). The appeal is frivolous and lacking in nonfrivolous points for appellate review. See Howard, 707 F.2d at 219-20. Accordingly, Garner's appeal is dismissed. See 5th Cir. R. 42.2. Because Garner has accumulated too many strikes under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g) for the district court, the district court's dismissal of his suit "on the ground that the pleading, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that the movant is entitled to 2 judgment as a matter of law” is certified as a “final judgment” pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1291. See Coghlan v. Starkey, 852 F.2d 806, 814 (5th Cir. 1988).
