“ this is an easy, efficient tool for. Abstract There is a long-standing claim that it is impossible to express priority in natural language. In this paper we introduce a system designed to produce natural language principles of arity-indexed priority. The system is based on rules which represent each operator as a set of grammatical atoms, where atoms of equal priority are combined through some fixed order. The rules define a number of grammatical families which are specified with restrictions on the sets of grammatical atoms which can be used. The system is analysed, and, in order to interpret these rules, a specific part-of-speech tagset is introduced which encodes relationships between the grammatical families. The system, which is entirely written in Prolog, is available from the first author. The present invention concerns a supply conduit for a fluidized bed coke oven chamber, which conduit can be moved into an open position and a closed position and which provides fluid access for an inlet line and for an outlet line. In a known supply conduit of this kind (SE 80900) there are a number of features which allow the apparatus to operate effectively. The very particular arrangement of the guide tubes is designed to cause the feed of grains of coking coal from a charging port to the fluidized bed chamber to take place in a smooth flow line. In the present state of the art it is possible to achieve this result on the basis of well-regulated blower power. The feed of grains of coking coal is caused to take place in a smooth flow line by the curvature of the incoming edge of the feeding pipe
